FEMALE SUFFRAGE.

Speeches, Songs, and Resolutions of Sojourner Truth, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Parker Pillsbury, Lucretia Mott, Charles Burley, Ernestine L. Rose, Rev. Mr. May, Susan B. Anthony, Major Haggerty, Frances D. Gage, and Others -Woman Demands Equality with the Negro - Republican Hypocrisy Denounced, Etc.

From the New York papers of yesterday.

The first anniversary of the American Equal Rights Association took place at the Church of the Puritans yesterday. The morning session was to have opened at 10 o'clock, but at that hour the attendance was so slim that the opening was delayed. The audience comprised the customary assortment of both sexes and all colors, including a fair sprinking of the latest styles of fashion, as well as the most antiquated Contunies.

About 11 o'clock Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stana moment to recover her breath, announced that in the absence of the President, Mrs. Lucretta Mott, Robert Purvis, of Philadelphia, one of the Vice Presidents, would occupy the chair.
Mr. Purvis had but just embarked on a well-considered exordium, when he was interrupted by the arrival of Mrs. Mott, whose appearance on the platform was greeted with applause. A MODEL REPORT.

Miss Susan B. Anthony, being called upon for the report, stated that she had no written report, as the work had required all her time. They had collected in contributions $4714, and had expended more money than that by holding lectures, conventious, printing tracts, docu-ments, etc. The work was so extensive that it was impossible to secure men and women enough to perform it. She alluded to the efforts of Lucy Stone and her husband in Kansas, canvassing that State to secure equal rights to all under the Constitution of that State. In conclusion, she hoped the work would be prose cuted until no human being, under any pre-tended republican form of government, should be deprived of equal rights under that govern-

Lucretia Mott briefly spoke of her interest in the cause, pleading her age as an excuse for her lack of personal participation in the work. She concluded by gracefully yielding the presidency to Mr. Purvis.

A CHARACTER.

Miss Solourner Truth was announced as the next speaker, and her appearance was the signal for general good humor. Sojourner has been a slave forty years and free forty years, and is not at all afraid of speaking before white folks or speaking out in meeting. She dresses much as she used to on the plantation, and wears a white kerchief around her head, a la mauma all over the South. She spoke in a clear, loud tone, with a strong African accent, as follows:-SPEECH OF SOJOURNER TRUTH.

My friends, I am rejoiced. I come for another appeal. I 'pealed to the public many years on behalf of the poor slave, and now he has got his liberty there is more in de land dat haint got sone at all. I believe that women should have their rights. We have had so much good luck to have slavery partially destroyed, not entirely, I want root and branch destroyed. We will then feel that we are free indeed; that we can fill every place that is open to all that have got their rights. I feel that if Pve got to answer for the sins done in my body, just as much as a man bas, I have a right to have just as much as a man. (Laughter and applause.)]

WIFE SLAVERY. Well, children, I am old enough to be the mother of all here. (Laughter.) You see, the colored man has got his rights; but has the colored woman? (Laughter.) The colored man has got his rights, out nobody makes fuss about de colored women's right. (Applause.) Why, de colored man will be massa ober de woman, an' it will be jus as bad as before. (Laughter.) Now, while this stir is going on, I want to keep it stirrin' till it goes right laughter)-because, if you stop, it will be terrible hard work to start de engine again. (Laughter.) So I appeal on 'half of de women. The white woman knows a good deal the colored woman don't know it—that is, those that are lately 'mancipated. The colored men will learn, like the rest of the men, that they are a kind of masters. They will try to be mas-ters over their colored wives. (Laughter.)

WASHING AND IRONING. I want the colored woman to understand that if she earns anything it is her own. But if a colored wife goes out to do a little washing—that is about as high as black tolks get—(laughter)—when she comes back with a little money the husband comes in. "Where have you been? "To work." "Well, you got paid?" "Yes." "Then let me have it." "But I want to "Yes." "Then let me have it." "But I want to buy so and so for the children." "Well, I don't want words about it; so hand it over." (Laughter.) So he takes it, and walks away, nobody knows where. Then he comes in at night, "Got anything to eat?" "No." "What's the reason?" "No money." "Well, you might the reason ?" "No money." "Well, you might ha' got it." That's the way it is; a woman can't daim anything that she can call her own. Why? She stands on the same footing that he does. She can't put her money in ner pocket; he can get it. He can spend his'n, and he can hold her'n She can't get what she wants for her and her children. The man claims her money, body, and everything for himself, (Laughter and applause.)

NOW'S THE TIME.

It's not right. Now's the time to make a strong appeal for woman's rights. How beautiful it will be when you can see women sitting like the lawyers and judges. You see a poor woman coming up to be tried by men. If you are going to be tried by men, why can't you have a part in the matter and try him too When the poor woman stance before the bar perhaps the man who looks down on her has a nose red like a cigar. (Laughter.) No woman dares speak in her behalt. They ask her certain questions for their amusement, and no women are to speak. Men haven't all the majesty. want won en in their places. (Laughter.) They would know what to ask and what to say, which the men don't know, for I have been standing and listening, and have seen the poor women go off and the men go "he, he, he. (Giggling.)

JURY WOMEN WANTED. Now I want women there to sit and hear-not these pertifoggers. I mean these lawyers, judges, and jurymen. If it ain't decent for these pertifoggers. women to be there, if ain't decent for men to be (laughter)-you ought'nt to be anywhere f it isn't decent enough for women to be there. (Applause.) This is the trouble with some of the men. They are so mean they don't want the women to know it. Let nobody be ashamed to go to the bar and give testimony. Nobody will be daunted. You know it is a sister sits in udement, she will not ask you any question it it is unworthy. (Applause.)

HER AGE. I have been here eighty years—that is long enough for anybody. There is a great deal of work to be done, so I will have to tarry. I was forty years a slave and forty years free, and I would wish to live forty years longer if I could have equal rights for those that live. I suppose that's the reason I stayed-to fight this for the right; that every human being shall have that God-given right. As I said a good many years ago, there is some men who be lieve that if women got their rights men would have no rights leit. They seem to be half scared. (Laughter.) They were so frightened that some of them turned to crying. (Laughter.)

HER LOGIC ABOUT WORK AND PAY. Did God ever have men to have women's ghts? "No, No!" Men have all the rights, says I. Are you afeard that women will take your rights? They don't want 'em. I have done as much work as the biggest part of men. If I do as much work as a man, why can't I be paid so? (Applause.) If I write and make accounts as well as a man, why can't I have as much money? They don't do more than I, why should they get more pay? There is the German women, they do as much work as a man, but I to the progress of individual men. The second he gets a dollar and she gets gets a half, because she is a woman. She cats as much as a man if she can get it. (Applause and laughter.) Noone can get it. (Applied to the much she must out, or how much sense—you can't help that. Laughter.) I have seen some women that had ater sense than the men had. (Laughter.) I have telked with them. Give them a chance, That is what the men fear-they fear that women will degrade them. They ought to out-grow men for a while to bring them to their place. (Great laughter and applause.)

A PREDICTION AND COMPLAINT. This cause must move. Yes, it must. They used to say to me: "Sojourner, it's no use. You says I, "let me be in de body or out ob de body, I shall see it." When the dark days were here I thought I should live to see it. Did me and you know that it would come to pass, men would be better and women would be better. But men tear to give women their rights. Even the "Oh, you are only a woman; you don't know." They talk so to their mothers, (Laughter.) Like Adam, when God asked what he had been doing, he laid it all to God and the woman. (Laughter.) Just so, when children grow up, they lay all the blame to women.

SUPPLIES WANTED FROM THE ENEMY. We want weman's rights, but we look to you or the money. When woman's rights come will have it in our own pockets. (Laughter.) We won't run to men for money; we will have it ourselves. (Applause.) The men will have to ask us for some money, (Laughter.) We want them to give us a little now, until we get want them to give us a little how, intil we get our rights, then we won't be troubled any more about asking for money. Then you will have peace; you will be joyful; you and your wife and daughter will stand beside you. You will feel like standing without being propped up. (Applause.) Let's keep the work moving while it is moving, and then you won't be asked for Women will have money as well as

MISS ANTHONY'S INEVITABLE COLLECTION. Susan B. Anthony at this appropriate point announced that the finance committee would take up a collection and receive subscriptions, didn't want all smail stamps either, but would not refuse them.

SOJOURNER'S CHANT.

Sojourner then commenced a weird, wailing song, with a very queer tune, and odd though clear pronunciation of words, her old head swaying to and fro in harmony. As near as the reporter could catch the words, the song was as follows:-

We are goin' home—we had visions bright
Oi that holy land, that world of light.
Where the cold and dark night of time is passed,
And the morning of sternity is come at last;
Where the weary sants no more shall roam,
But dwell in their peaceful and sunny home;
Where the light celestial gems our crown.
And the waves of bitss are dashin' roun'—
Oh-h-h-li
Oh, that beautiful home;
Oh-b, that beautiful world

We are goin' home: we soon shall be
Where the sky is clear and the soil is free:
Where the victor's song floats from the plains,
And the anthems of seris and glorious strains:
Where the sun rolls down his brilliant flood,
And beams on a world that's lair and good:
And the stars that shine on nature's dome
Will sparkis and dance from their spirit's home,
Oh-h-h-h!
Oh, that beautiful home;
Oh-h, that beautiful world.

There tears and sighs, which here are given, There tears and sighs, which here are given, will change for the glad gongs of heaven: There beauteous forms will sing and shine, A-guarded well by the hand Livine; Furs love and friendship will be jined, Waiting before that princely band; And the glory of God, like a molten sea, Will bathe that immortal company.

Oh-h-h-li!
Oh, that beautiful home;
Oh-h, that beautiful world.

he ransomed throng they see and bless The ransomed throng they see and bless
The holy city of gorgeousness;
The verdant earth and angels' choir,
The flowers that never winter wear;
The conqueror's song it sounds afar
As wafted on the amproslat air;
Through endless years we then shall prove
The depths of a Saviour's matchiess love.
Oh-h-h-h!
Oh, that beautiful home;
Oh-h, that beautiful world.

THE EFFECT OF THE FREEDMEN'S BUREAU. Mrs. Frances D. Gage, in illustration of the statement that even among the negro slaves of the South the man is the master of the woman, told a story of a colored man who was exceedingly indignant because the Government having freed him, and given him land to work on, would not hire a woman to nurse his children, so that his wife Nancy could work in the field. But, said Mrs. Gage, in an attempt to convince this humble but intelligent freedman, the Government cannot afford to pay eight dollars : month for a woman to take care of your children. Your wife must be allowed to do that General Saxton wishes to be very kind to you, but he refuses to allow this to be done any more. But the colored man could not see the instice of this, and went away grambling that it was a shame that such a good field-hand as Nancy should be kept at home wasting her time nursing children. The black man learns Sejourner Truth Dats a fact! Mrs. Gage-That's a fact, Sojourner; you know it. Mrs. Gage went on to say that the colored man considered it his right to make his wife work for him in the fields, and to prevent her taking care of her children, as the master had done before. Are you going to force prosutution and wrong on that people? Are going to make it true that the only woman who has the right to govern her children is the mother of illegitimate children? The women there do not like to be married in the church, for the church compels obedience to the hus band. I am talking now for the colored women of the South, lorgetting my own degradation. It is said women don't want to vote in this country. I tell you it's a libel on the women of this country,

Sojourner Truth-"Hyer, hyer!"
Man in audience-"they ought to want to

ATTACK ON PHILLIPS AND BEECHER,

Mrs. Gage-The women who have worked night and day in the last war, when this great public opinion which had crushed them down litted, and said:-"You will not shrink from voting," (Applause.) Let Wendell Phillips and Henry Ward Beecher stand on this platform and ask the suffrage for woman, and leave aside their objections.

Mrs. Stanton-Mr. Beecher has not made any. Mrs. Gage—Lately he has, Mr. Purvis—1 understand Mr. Phillips to say bat woman does not want to vote, as a reason why we should agitate this subject the more. Mrs. Gage-Let him explain it in that way, and I will accept it. I don't find him saying that in these latter years. He said it a few years ago, but I don't hear him saving anything about it now. I addressed many addrences last winter, and whenever I said "we must give woman the right to vote," there was a shout and a clapping of hands from the whole audience. FREE MARRIAGES.

Two hundred years ago George Fox asserted that it was not necessarily required that a mar-riage should be legalized by the church; that the parties themselves, acknowledging themselves the union, and the obligation of so sacred a union, were sufficient in the society to which they belonged. They called together their friends and mutually acknowledged their union. It was entirely reciprocal-no assumption of authority on the one hand, no promise of obedience on the other. The simple consent of the parties was sufficient, without the necessity of minister or magistrate to give sanction.

A craxy woman attempted to say something, but the meeting was adjourned over her head.

Evening Session.

Lucretia Mott occupied the chair, and after vainly endeavoring to prevail on Frances Gage, Mrs. Rose, and others, to open the proceedings, finally introduced Colonel Morse, of Missouri. Mr. Morse succinctly reviewed the popular objections to the enfranchisement of women, and after speaking a few minutes yielded to

PARKER PILLSBURY. Mr. Pillsbury offered a couple of resolutions, The first of these expressed the idea that the progress of nations has not been proportionate declared that the increasing conspiracies, revolutions and the wars attending both the beginning and progress of even the most liberal and eblightened nations, the constant and crushing taxation and every form of oppression, are strong reasons for the investigation of the causes of these evils, and the application of the most radical and extraordinary remedies for their removal.

HISTORY OF THE WORLD. Mr. Pilisbury commenced his lecture in the same manner that Irving does Knickerbocker's History of New York-by giving a history of the world. He, however, seemed to be using his history for the purpose of pointing a moral. He then read from manuscript the passage from Sidney Smith's works in relation to the taxes imposed on everything in his time.

THE UNITED STATES A PAILURE.

He continued, if seventy years be the life of man, what should be the age of a nation. No nation has ever reached manhood. Our own nation is not a hundred years old, but it had behind it the chronicles of many centuries. We commenced with a Washington for President and a John Jay in the Supreme Court. We dept and a John Jay in the Supreme Court. We closed that dispensation with James Buchanan instead of Washington and Judge Taney instead of John Jay, with a war to open treason and rebellion before us. We have now six thou-sand millions of dollars of debt, a President whose weakness and wickedness finds no parallel, a Secretary of State who has become his for, a Secretary of State with a Senate too cowardly or too corrupt to impose the one, or

For more than two years we have been attempting to restore the broken fragments of our Union. With the history and experience t tour thousand years shining back upon us, o far we have falled, and under any proposed solicy we shall fall. By all the claims of justice and righteousness we descrive to fail, for we are still behind those claims. The United States, youngest among the nations, wetnursed by lorty centuries of history, and schooled by all the experience of the age, with half the globe for their inheritance, with Christianity their faith, and republicanism their form of government, surveyed a precocious childhood, and then fell a victim of their own vices. To-day they are in the hands of many physicians, but of very doubtful reputation, physicians who seem far less desirous of curing the patient than of dividing and sharing the estate.

THE SEX OF THE DEITY.

Theodore Parker, when he prayed one morning "Our Father and Our Mother," struck the key-note of a great idea. Women might not vote as well as intelligent men at the first attempt. The first attempt is not always a success. Even nature, if we believe the Scottish poet, improved in a second attempt:-

"Her prentice hand she tried on man, And then she made the lasses, oh!"

She might at first elect John Morrissey, even though Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Horace Greeley were in the field,

THE FIRST BATTLE-FIELD.

Miss Susan B. Anthony said the Finance Committee would go through the audience to get unds. She said that funds were primarily to be used in Kansas. That State had passed brough trials, and come out of them triumphantly, for the right; and it is now proposed that that state set the nation this grand example of econstruction on the basis of universal sufirage. She asks us to belp her, and it is more important to do that, that we should send the agencies she demands,

PILLSBURY GETS A PILL.

Lucretia Mott stated that she feared that a discouraging inference would be drawn from the views just presented. She thought we were not so near the destruction of the republic as it might seem from Mr. Pillsbury's speech. She was glad to hear him say that he had composed it in a sick room. (Great laughter.) She hoped that some other friends would view the favorable side of the picture. Even Nineveh re-pented, and was not destroyed; and, after all, might be that we could muster energy and later enough to pay off all these thousand miltions. (Applause.) She introduced Mrs. Ernestine L. Rose, with the wish that her address would be a little more hopeful than that of Mr. Pillsbury.

Mrs. Rose said the fact that the ladies can be sick as well as the gentlemen was another proof that they were very much alike. Mr. Pillsbury had alluded to the rise, progress, and destruc-tion of nations; but, after all, we have to come down to dollars and cents. (Applause.) We live entirely in a practical age. She could show them in a few minutes that if they had ufficient of the ROOT OF ALL EVIL n their hands, there would be no need of their meeting. They could obtain the ejective franchise without making a single speech. (Applause.) Give them but a million of dollars, and they would have the elective franchise from the next Legislature. (Great laughter and lause.) But, as they had not a million dollars. they wanted a million voices. There are always two ways to obtain an object. If they had the means they could have ong ago. (Laughter.) But having no money, they must create public opinion. If friends think they have beard speeches enough, they must remember that these speeches are neces ary to create public opinion. Look at mempers of Congress running all over the South to address crowds of freedmen. Why? Because they hold the ballot. Why not ten or fifteen ears ago? Because there was no political end to be served.

BOUGHT THE LEGISLATURE

CRICKEN HEARTS.

She presumed that there were present, as there always have been, some timid individuals called chicken-hearted (laughter), who were frightfully atraid that women would be deraded at the ballot-box. There could be no anger of that, for Congress would pass a Freedman's Bureau biil-(Isughter)-to protect women at the ballot-box at the same time. There was no fear that woman would be districed. But, it was said that woman would nots with rude men at the nailot box. Not so any more than at church. Should not the tailet-tox be as sacreu as the church? Infinitey more so, because we can pray in secret, but voting must be done in public. (Applause.)

NOVEL BUBLICAL CONSTRUCTION.

They had been told this evening that it was not good for man to be alone. Now, if it was not well for him to be alone in the Garden of den, it was not well for him to be alone at the allot-box. (Great laughter.) What would man have been it woman had not given him to taste if the tree of knowledge? She believed the epublic was already destroyed, else there could be no need of reconstruction. This reconstrucon must be based on a sound foundation. The councation must be proportionate to the supergructure, and the reason that our republic has not achieved the duration of monarchies is that t embraced principles of human rights in its superstructure which it denied in its foundation.

THE HYPOCRISY OF REPUBLICAN LEADERS.

When Chase, when Sumner, when Stevens then Wilson talk to the negro about the im portance of having the franchise, and stop short giving it to woman, I proclaim them hypo-(Applause.) They call themselves the friends of the slave, and speak to them because they have got the ballot. We have not got that right, hence they do not say one word about he importance of our having the elective franchise. I do not speak of parties, For one, I would never be bound to party if I had the ballot to-day.

THE SECRET OF IT. Perhaps our Senators know that women would not be such pliable material in their bands as the newly freed staves, and hence will not give them the ballot. We would not be, you may depend upon that.
